Our Oklahoma Correspondence

THE oft-repeated assertion by fighting men that football is an excellent conditioner for waging war seems to have been taken seriously by the male students at the University of Oklahoma.

Scores are playing the game on the bermuda-mattressed playfields at Norman. Some assay high enough in talent to be candidates for the junior varsity squad, which will engage teams from the state's small colleges. * * *

Candidate

Such a one is an earnest undergraduate from Colombia. He heard about footballs value to prospective soldiers, reflected that his homeland might follow Brazil into active resistance at any time, and reported forthwith to John Jacobs, the Jay-Vee coach, who told him to go draw his equipment.

The numerous pads and other protective gear were a complex sartorial puzzle to our cousin from Latin America. Only one item among the assortment of armor seemed to indicate its use by its appearance.

No Fit

THE boy dressed himself as best he could and trotted onto the field. His arrival touched off amazement, followed by unbridled

Dumbfounded Coach Jacobs began to ask a specific question, then amended it to express a generalization:

"Everything all right?" "Yes," said the boy, "everything's all right except some of this equipment doesn't fit very well. This hair bandage was made for a bigger head than mine."

Lesson

MR. JACOBS looked closer and confirmed his early suspicion. The kid had used his just-issued elastic protective belt to hold back his long black hair. His helmet? He reported soberly that he had left it in his locker to serve the purpose for which it was obviously intended—a receptacle for his watch, knife, rings and other valuables.

Mr. Jacobs immediately detailed him to the varsity dressing room, to observe players in the

Workout

No BIG SIX coach is more in-sistent upon secret varsity practice than Oklahoma's peppery little Snorter Luster. He suspects the presence of fifth columnists in places where Biff Jones never even visioned them in nightmares.

But Oklahoma fans, unlike fans in the vicinity of other conference campuses, have a measure of compensation. They are welcome to watch the junior varsity ready itself for its games with Edmond Normal, Baptist and Tahlequah.

Mr. Jacobs' reason for opening the gates is more than a yen for, sociability, It has its practical aspects. Says he: We want fans to follow us, too. If they are going to do so they gotta be in condition to see what goes on, because some of the places we'll play haven't any stands. So we welcome 'em to practice, and encourage 'em to run up and down the sidelines."

Memories

DROF, LUSTER became reminiscent the other day, after declaring to an informal dressing room round table that the team with the "better, meaner line" will win nine out of 10 games. Texas last year, he said, had

The aviators presented the best running back of the game in Bill Schatzer, formerly of North Central college, but it was their expert aerial attack that bewildered Northwestern. Schatzer set up the Cadets' first touchdown by sprinting 63 yards to the Wildcats' 24, the first time he got his hands on the ball. He scored a moment later from the one.

The Iowans made their second and third touchdowns on forward basses. They completed six of the best offensive rampart he had ever seen. The forwards unleashed against the Sooners by Tennessee in the Orange Bowl were the most vicious . . . "They played like pros." (Editor's note: They were).

The strongest line physically to come under his observation, said Snorter, was that "Percheronchassised Nebraska wall in 1928. Those giants didn't bother to trap you, or lead you off and hit in behind you. They'd tell you where they were going and then they'd go. Hurdle the wounded and step on the dead' was their motto. When they rumbled past the ground shook." Snorter, I am sure, has been interested in the fact that the linemen on this year's Husker squad that will engage the Sooners at Norman October 24 are coached by Gus Holm, the No. 1 guard of that Brobdingnagian battalion he so much admires.

Fumbling, Bumbling Nebraskans Never Threaten in Debacle

Iowa Stadium, Iowa City, Ia., Sept. 26-The Cornhuskers' first exposure to wartime football this windswept afternoon turned out to be 30-odd to Say Quits minutes of almost-unadulterated errors, embarrassment, and simplest humiliation.

This unhappiness was inflicted by a passel of Iowans who appeared to take vast delight in parading their odds-on superiority, and in Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 26 (AP)—pleasantly baiting and teasing the touchdown label. The time came with three minutes left before recess.

An offside penalty gave the Hawkeyes a first down 37 yards from the line. Tommy faded back, and still moving, tossed to Ted

Curran, who connected on the 23, near the east side line. Four Nebraskans bore down upon Curran. He eluded them all, and none touched him as he followed a swift zigzag course into the end zone. Then Tommy demonstrated that his feet also were crammed with talent by place kicking the extra point. The Hawkeyes used the third
